STUDENT-LED CLUB HELPS RAISE AWARENESS ON IRREGULAR MIGRATION IN GHANA

“We are not relenting on our efforts but will continue to champion the safe migration campaign. We want as many people as possible to know the risks involved so they will use safer and dignified options,” says Sofiyya, 19-year-old young Ghanaian senior high school student. Sofiyya is the President and a founder of the Mercy Migration Club in Accra, which empowers students to learn about, and help raise awareness on the dangers of irregular migration. The club is the first ever student-led migration club in the country and also provides a space to discuss pathways for Ghanaian youth to thrive without risking their lives. More than 30 members of the club, all high school students, have worked with their other comrades to discuss the risks of irregular migration and have sensitized more than 600 students so far.

Aside from unemployment and access to housing, lack of access to healthcare is among the main issues faced by migrants who voluntarily return to Sudan, as in other places. A new pilot project between Sudan’s National Health Insurance Fund (NHIF) and the EU-IOM Joint Initiative will provide access to healthcare to returning migrants, many of whom are in high need of medical assistance, including those having spent time in detention centres in Libya. The pilot will cover 2,000 returnee families for a year, beginning in July 2019, and could pave the way for access by all migrant returnees and their families to primary healthcare. The EU-IOM Joint Initiative will pay the participating families’ annual premiums to the NHIF, with the fund being responsible for providing them with health services. Until now, the programme has been funding medical screenings in Sudan and referring targeted returnees to medical service providers and covering their medical fees.
